Define Your Value Proposition

Step 1: Identify your knowledge, attitudes, skills, and beliefs that make you qualified to be a great real estate agent.

- List your knowledge, attitudes, skills, and beliefs in the Your Attributes column in the table below. An example has been provided for each category.
- After you have written your attributes, CIRCLE the ones that align with what buyers and sellers value from the NAR data on pages 4.6-4.7. STAR the attributes that show how you stand out as an agent.

Category	Your Attributes
Your Knowledge	Example: Finance degree
Your Attitudes	Example: Committed
Your Skills	Example: Problem solving
Your Beliefs	Example: Integrity

Step 2: Transform the value you provide and the value of KW and your Market Center into benefits for your clients.

- Choose three attributes you circled or starred in Step 1 and rewrite them in terms of how they benefit your client. An example has been provided for you in the first row.

Your Knowledge, Attitudes, Skills, and Beliefs	Benefit to Your Client
Example: Integrity	Honest, dedicated service and the assurance that you will keep the commitments you make

- Choose three examples of value you receive from Keller Williams and your Market Center and rewrite them in terms of how they benefit your client. Refer to what you learned in Ignite Session 1 if needed. An example has been provided for you in the first row.

Keller Williams and Market Center Value	Benefit to Your Client
Example: KW App	From appointment to close, the KW App's features provide opportunities to stay connected with your client throughout the entire transaction

Step 3: Build your Value Proposition statement .

Combine a client benefit from each table you wrote in Step 2 to create a Value Proposition statement you can use in your use while prospecting, marketing, and in your dialogue with your clients.

Example: As you navigate your real estate transaction, I provide service that is dedicated and personalized to your needs by using the KW App to stay connected with you.
